2023 SPECIAL APPROPRIATIONS VETO TABLE ENDNOTES

There are several court cases and attorney general opinions the LCS relies on when considering line-item vetoes, the main cases being State ex rel. Sego v. Kirkpatrick, State ex rel. Coll v. Carruthers, State ex rel. Taylor v. Johnson, State ex rel. Smith v. Martinez and State ex rel. Cisneros v. Martinez. In Sego, the New Mexico supreme court said, "The power of partial veto is the power to disapprove. This is a negative power, or the power to delete or destroy a part or item, and is not a positive power, or the power to alter, enlarge or increase the effect of the remaining parts or items. It is not the power to enact or create new legislation by selective deletions. . .". In Coll, the court said that an improper intrusion into the executive managerial function is one in which a legislative condition "purport[s] to reserve to the legislature powers of close supervision that are essentially executive in character" or attempts to "make detailed, minuscule, inconsequential executive management decisions". In Sego, the court made clear that "a partial veto must be so exercised that it eliminates or destroys the whole of an item or part and does not distort the legislative intent, and in effect create legislation inconsistent with that enacted by the Legislature, by careful striking of words, phrases, clauses or sentences". Court decisions have distinguished between proper and improper conditions or limitations. A governor may veto an improper condition or limitation and retain the appropriation; conversely, if a line-item veto is made to a proper condition, the appropriation fails.

1 – Strikes "or unencumbered" in the reversion clause of every section of the bill.

2 – Strikes "Aztec" as the court to which the appropriation was directed. The veto is infirm on two fronts: the governor has substituted her judgment for that of the legislature; and it changes and enlarges the purpose for which the legislature appropriated the money, namely, for security upgrades in the Aztec district court. The appropriation for the Aztec court does not intrude on the executive managerial function as to how court security upgrades will be accomplished. In Coll, the New Mexico supreme court stated that executive managerial function concerns the management of the expenditure once approval is given, not to a condition precedent to the expenditure of appropriated funds. A proper veto would have taken the whole item.

3 – Strikes "east". The veto message said the word would "unnecessarily restrict the availability and efficient use of funds", but it is unclear how such a strike changes the availability of the money or its efficient use. A proper veto would have taken the whole item.

4 – Strikes "resource officer". School resource officers are commissioned police officers assigned, and specially trained, to work in schools; they are not security guards. By the deletion of the purpose of the appropriation, what remains is meaningless and confusing. If the legislature simply wanted to give money to a school in Aztec, it would properly give the money to the public education department. A proper veto would have taken the whole item.

5 – Strikes language describing the appropriation for a type of youth golf program in Kirtland. The governor invoked the anti-donation clause. There are arguments on either side as to the part of the veto that eliminated the function of the program, but that function, building character, etc., is not necessarily determinative of an unconstitutional donation. Local governments may provide services like recreation directly or may contract, but they, as well as the state agency responsible for the appropriation, may not violate the anti-donation clause when expending the appropriation. In addition, in striking the location, i.e., Kirtland, the veto unconstitutionally distorts the legislature's intent and, essentially, creates a new appropriation for anywhere in San Juan county. A proper veto would have taken the whole item.

6 – Strikes "and improvements". Although not consistently applied, the veto message explained the governor's aversion to what she considers to be capital appropriations in HB 2 Junior.

7 – Strikes "repairs" language.

8 – Strikes "operational funding".

9 – Strikes "to contract". The veto message said the language had rendered the item unfeasible, but does not explain how that is true.

10 – Strikes the nonreversion language. It is the practice of the legislature to specify whether an appropriation does or does not revert. Although a fund may be nonreverting, that does not mean that the legislature may not require an appropriation to the fund to revert; the language merely clarified that this appropriation would not revert. The effect of the veto is to fall back on the overarching reversion at the beginning of the section, so that the unexpended balance of this appropriation will revert at the end of fiscal year 2024. (Note that the nonreversion was not stricken in an appropriation to another nonreverting fund, the energy transition displaced worker assistance fund.)

11 – Strikes three out of four uses for the appropriation. The veto message states that the language unnecessarily restricts the availability and efficient use of funds, but it appears that the opposite is true; the veto narrows the use of the appropriation. The veto distorts legislative prerogative and substitutes the governor's judgment for that of the legislature. A proper veto would have taken the whole item.

12 – Strikes the purpose of the appropriation. The veto message says the language unnecessarily restricts the availability and efficient use of funds, but the veto leaves no purpose for the state engineer to engage with the east Puerto de Luna acequia and the constitutional requirement that an appropriation distinctly specify the object to which an appropriation is to be applied is ignored. Clearly, the legislature did not intend for the state engineer to simply turn over $150,000 to the acequia. A proper veto would have taken the whole item.

13 – Strikes the coordinator position.

14 – Strikes the report requirement.

15 – Strikes "interns" and the high school locations. The veto message states the vetoed language would provide recurring funds for personnel; however, nothing in a junior bill converts into a recurring obligation unless the affected state agency proposes continuation of the item in a future proposed budget and the legislature agrees and funds the proposal. See Endnotes 2 and 5 for discussion of the legislature's authority to direct where an appropriation is to be used. The legislature was not attempting to appropriate for all APS high schools and the veto impermissibly distorts and enlarges the appropriation. A proper veto would have taken the whole item.

16 – Strikes "facilities improvements".
