LFC HEARING BRIEF

AGENCY: State Investment Council (SIC), Educational Retirement Board (ERB) and Public Employees Retirement Association (PERA)

PREPARED FOR: Investments Oversight Committee

DATE: June 8, 2009

PURPOSE OF HEARING: Informational

PREPARED BY: Michelle Aubel, LFC Senior Fiscal Analyst; Dan White, LFC Economist

Because alternative fund managers raise capital intermittently, outsourcing marketing duties to third-party marketers can be more efficient than building in-house programs.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Charges were recently filed in New York alleging that David Loglisci and Henry "Hank" Morris, two former aides to former New York State Comptroller Alan Hevesi, conducted a fraudulent "pay to play" scheme to extract payments from private equity and hedge fund managers in exchange for investment commitments. Under the scheme, both Loglisci and Morris acted as third-party marketers (3PM) or placement agents, collecting fees from investment managers for assistance in obtaining investment commitments from the $122 billion New York pension fund. While 3PM payments are not in themselves illegal, both the New York State Attorney General's Office and the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) allege that in this case these payments were nothing more than "thinly disguised kickbacks" to Loglisci, Morris and the comptroller himself, who has already plead guilty to unrelated charges.

Third-party Marketing. Alternative investments such as private equity typically require a direct investment with a fund manager as opposed to an open-market purchase through a broker. To raise sufficient capital for investment, fund managers often hire third-party marketers. According to the Third-Party Marketers Association, third-party marketers "assist in increasing institutional assets for their investment manager clients." They can serve a purpose due to the long and, at times, arduous process of soliciting a direct investment of public money. Due to its non-transparent and unregulated nature, however, 3PM is prone to misuse and corruption as is evidenced by the current situation in New York.

As the New York case illustrates, differentiating between a legitimate 3PM and an individual with political ties posing as one selling influence can be difficult. As the Wall Street Journal reports: "The main legal issue for the investment firms turns on whether they knew or should have known, that fees they paid to certain entities for access to the New York fund were legitimate or improper kick backs and whether they were properly disclosed."

Investment Staff Oversight. The potential for abuse related to 3PM when selecting investment managers was recognized by state personnel as early as 2005, when an investment working group composed of agency investment staff, representatives from the Department of Finance and Administration (DFA) and the Governor's Office made final recommendations for revising policies (Attachment A) to accommodate new legislation that expanded allowable asset

House Bill 389 –

Subjecting state investment agencies to the Prudent Investor Act eliminated the need for a "legal list:" a menu of allowable investment options. Now all agencies can invest in virtually any asset so long as it meets the prudent investor standard and fits the agency's policies. This shift from traditional assets naturally increased the required sophistication of those responsible for choosing investments and advisors, monitoring portfolios, and assessing risks. Whether that sophistication has been sufficient is now under scrutiny.

classes and exempted investment-related contracts from the procurement code. The group advocated ensuring "the use of a competitive and transparent process to select each outside investment manager, consultant, and/or advisor." In addition, the group foresaw potential issues with third-party marketing when it recommended information for alternative investments be publicly disclosed: "A report for the appropriate oversight board on at least a quarterly basis disclosing the name of investment manager, investment firm or general partner, amount of investment; and any fees paid to third-party marketers by the investment manager or general partner." The recommendation for 3PM disclosure is not reflected in SIC board minutes discussing procurement policy changes adopted in August 2005.

LFC Oversight. Since the enactment of the Prudent Investor Act in 2005, sponsored by Representative "Lucky" Varela, LFC has closely monitored the state's alternative investment programs. In addition to private equity, alternative investments include such non-traditional asset classes as real assets, real estate and hedge funds. The theory behind adding alternative assets to a portfolio is that they improve investment risk/return potential by shifting the "efficient frontier" (a line depicting expected risks and returns for various portfolio combinations) upward from the traditional-only mix through greater diversification, as shown in Chart 1.

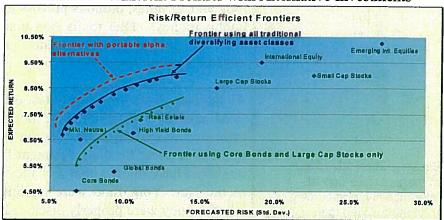

Chart 1 – Efficient Frontier with Alternative Investments

While SIC had been investing in certain alternative investments for over a decade, the Educational Retirement Board (ERB) and the Public Employee Retirement Association (PERA) began investigating the new options available to them in 2005. As early as 2006, LFC contracted Public Finance Management Group (PFM Group) to review alternative investment policies and procedures. PFM concluded that the state uses an acceptable methodology for valuing real estate. It underscored the following points for other investment types:

- Specialized consultants are important for hedge funds, due to this investment's complex nature.
- Using appropriate benchmarks, while difficult, is essential for tracking performance.
- Decreased transparency of fees and practices, as well as documented fraudulent activity, makes due diligence a critical aspect of oversight.

The report concluded, "While riskier, less transparent, and less liquid than more traditional asset classes, alternative investments can offer pension funds higher returns when handled with care."

Also in 2006, the LFC quarterly investment reports started following the agencies' progress toward executing their alternative strategies. While generally focused on performance, these reports regularly included expanded discussions on specific issues relating to alternative investments. This theme of tracking how well the agencies were mitigating the unique challenges posed by non-traditional asset classes produced two LFC hearings on the subject, one in August 2006 and a follow up hearing in April 2008. In addition to the issues of due diligence, illiquidity, valuation, fees, benchmarking, evaluating performance, transparency and reporting, these hearings highlighted three key issues relevant to the current discussion.

Expertise. As noted in the April 2008 hearing brief (included as Attachment B and posted on the LFC website), "First and foremost is obtaining the expertise necessary to navigate this new territory, which includes hiring outside consultants as well as building staff for analysis, accounting and monitoring." Table 1 identifies the outside consultants for each agency at that time. As discussed more extensively below, Aldus played a key role in implementing the private equity programs but has been terminated as the private equity advisor by SIC and ERB.

"The committee is particularly focused on oversight of the alternative investment program undertaken by the pension fund."

The alternative consultants were charged with sourcing deals, executing diversification, performing thorough due diligence, monitoring performance and reporting. Often the general consultants would provide additional analysis serving as an additional layer of due diligence. Outside legal council was also retained. Attachment C contains a more detailed list of current outside consultants.

Procurement. The August 2006 brief highlighted the importance of manager selection, particularly given the agencies' exemption from the procurement code for investment-related services: "It is important that the agencies have adopted investment policies to promote open and fair procedures for awarding contracts, provide transparency, track performance and comply with all relevant laws, statutes and codes of conduct." The flow chart in the sidebar, reproduced from the April 2008 brief, illustrates a basic five-step process designed to thoroughly vet investment opportunities and help ensure only those meeting policy and legal parameters were approved.

Monitoring. Given that alternatives are less transparent than publicly-traded securities, staff oversight of investments was identified as a critical element for program success. During the extensive interviews conducted by LFC staff for preparing the April 2008 report, all agencies reported that they were receiving reliable information about valuation and that reporting was sufficient. At the time LFC staff reported that "all of the investing agencies have responsible policies and procedures established with layers of monitoring to protect the state's money."

Actions Against Aldus

Since Mr. Meyer's arrest, SIC has terminated Aldus as its national private equity advisor. ERB will suspended the Aldus contract at the March 15, 2009, meeting of the Investment Committee and terminated the firm at a special May board meeting.

On May 6, 2009, New York State Comptroller Thomas P. DiNapoli filed suit in New York Supreme Court against Aldus Equity Partners, its principals and other entities, alleging fraud, bribery, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary and conspiracy.

The Securities and Exchange Commission in April amended it original New York complaint to include Aldus.

The FBI has questioned SIC and ERB staff about Aldus. New York Attorney General Andre Cuomo, who is attempting to develop a nationwide investigation into potential abuse of public pension funds in the United States, has been in contact with the New Mexico Attorney General's Office.

Another New Mexico tie to the New York case involves the Carlyle Group. Mr. Morris is listed as placement agent for an SIC 2005 deal. In May, Carlyle reached a $20 million settlement with New York Attorney General's Office. As part of the agreement, the company will stop using third-party marketers and restrict campaign contributions.

THIRD-PARTY MARKETING IN NEW MEXICO

New York/New Mexico Connections. Aldus Equity Partners, whose founder Saul Meyer was recently arrested in connection with the New York investigation, was hired in 2003 by SIC and in 2006 by ERB to advise the agencies on their national and overall private equity portfolios. Prior to Mr. Meyer's arrest, both ERB and SIC had temporarily suspended ties with the company pending further review. At a special April SIC meeting called by public member Andrew Davis, State Investment Officer Gary Bland said the primary consideration appeared to be performance, noting that Aldus brought them the "best deals." However, Mr. Davis noted that increased investment returns do not justify a breach of ethical conduct.

In response to the New York investigation, investment staff from all three agencies—ERB, SIC and PERA—have requested disclosure from funds in which they have made commitments regarding any 3PM fees. While they have received a number of responses regarding these fees, some funds have refused to disclose information relating to third-party payments. Thus, the full extent of 3PM payments to New Mexico agents or other ties to New York remains undetermined. SIC and the pension funds do not have subpoena power to force disclosure, unlike the Attorney General investigating the pay-to-play case in New York.

Key names associated with the New York scandal that have shown up as having received 3PM payments in New Mexico include both Hank Morris and Dan Hevesi (son of former NY Comptroller Alan Hevesi), who received 3PM payments of $250,000 or more related to SIC private equity investments. California-based placement agent Julio Ramirez, pleading guilty to one count of securities fraud in New York under the Martin Act, was also paid for in connection with three SIC investments and one ERB deal. Dallas hedge-fund executive Barrett Wissman, who also acted as a third-party agent in New York and has subsequently pleaded guilty to state securities fraud, received $150 million commitments for his hedge fund from the SIC and ERB. Both agencies have since withdrawn from the fund.

Although the New Mexico Attorney General's Office has been involved in recent events, details have not been released. Both SIC and ERB have refused public disclosure of a federal grand jury subpoena possibly issued in connection with an investigation into fees paid to third-party agents in this state.

Total 3PM Payments Reported*:

SIC: $27.1 million

ERB: $7.6 million

PERA: $1.1 million

Summary of 3PM Payments in New Mexico. Attachment D includes the lists of third-party marketer payments provided by SIC, ERB and PERA. Table 2 provides a summary of the payments of the top five 3PM earners by investment agency. One noticeable result of the agencies' findings was that while ERB and SIC investment funds reported 3PM payments in excess of $35 million, PERA's investment firms made about $1 million in payments. Additionally, in all of the incidences in which 3PM were used by funds soliciting investments from PERA, nationally licensed marketing or placement firms were used. The majority of payments made relative to ERB or SIC investments were made to in-state individuals even if a large, out-of-state marketing firm was involved.

^{*} Because this information was collected on a voluntary basis by investment agency staff, a number of funds either did not respond or refused to disclose all of the information necessary to compile all of the 3PM payments related to state investments. Therefore the amounts listed under "fees earned" are likely much higher than presented here.

Source: SIC, ERB and PERA Reports (Attachment D)

Trends. 3PM payments in New Mexico have been concentrated with a select few agents, a pattern similar to that identified by prosecutors in New York. Of the approximately $27 million in 3PM payments reported by SIC's investment firms, nearly 65 percent were paid to only three people. Nearly 50 percent went to only one individual, Marc Correra, through whom more than $1 billion of investment commitments were made by SIC. When combining payments from both SIC and ERB, Mr. Correra is reported to have earned at least $16 million. Exact amounts are difficult to determine because fees were split with other agents in some instances.

^{*}Some fund managers declined to provide the requested information or did not respond to inquiries. In addition, some fee terms include an ongoing slice of management fees. Thus, the totals are understated.

Vanderbilt Lawsuit

The director, acting on behalf of the General Services Department, Risk Management Division, through the public liability fund, will have the right and the duty to defend the covered party against a claim or suit.

Each of the governmental entities of the state of New Mexico is a covered party under this certificate of coverage. While acting within the scope of their duties, any official, officer, employee, or volunteer of the governmental entity is also a covered party to the extent the governmental entity owes indemnification and defense as defined in Section 41-4-4 of the Tort Claims Act.

The act specifies that unless an insurance carrier provides a defense, the state shall provide a defense, including costs and attorney fees. The state can recoup those expenses if, in the final judgment, it is shown that, while acting within the scope of his duty, the public employee acted fraudulently.

Fees. ERB's list also raises the question of why such high fees were paid to so few. On average, 3PM fees normally range from 1 percent to 2 percent. However, on one deal Mr. Correra earned 3 percent of a $40 million commitment, netting him $1.2 million in fees. Other arrangements with national marketing firms resulted in fees of less than 1 percent being paid. It is currently unclear to staff at both LFC and ERB why such a high fee was paid in this instance.

Delayed Payments. According to 3PM disclosure documents released by ERB, one hedge fund, "TAG, was the sub-advisor to HFV Asset Management LP until March 2008; upon assuming the role of primary advisor, TAG agreed to engage Cabrera Capital Markets as a third-party marketer." This agreement took place more than a year after a $50 million investment commitment was obtained from ERB. As discussed, third-party marketers are generally paid to solicit and secure investment commitments. Because the investment from ERB had already been obtained, it is unclear what services the 3PM agents provided the fund in this instance.

Local Placement Agents. In some instances, more than one firm is listed as a placement agent, and in some of those cases, New Mexico agents are listed along side well-known established marketing firms—such as Park Hill. In many of these instances, information from the investment firms themselves is lacking due to non-disclosure. ERB and SIC staff have attempted to retrieve such information unsuccessfully from a number of funds; however, as previously noted, these agencies do not have subpoena power.

Vanderbilt. The combined losses of $90 million for ERB and SIC investments in the Vanderbilt CDO is the subject of a civil whistleblower lawsuit, Frank Foy v New Mexico State et al. ERB staff have received verbal confirmation of a $2 million payment to Marc Correra paid by the firm. So far, the Risk Management Division of the General Services Department (GSD) reports that the state has spent over $162.4 thousand on the case defending covered parties, as described in the sidebar. ERB recently submitted a budget adjustment request for $50 thousand to cover legal fees associated with the suit.

Aldus and 3PM Payments. It is unknown whether Aldus directly paid 3PM fees in New Mexico as part of obtaining its advisory contracts for SIC and ERB or as part of the $75 million commitment ERB made to a private equity co-mingled fund managed by Aldus. ERB requested the information but has not received a response. However, after discussions with investment staff, the firm's actions regarding the 3PM fees paid by the funds it recommended to ERB appear to be unprofessional.

SIC has implemented a permanent ban on third-party placement or marketing agents by investment firms. ERB does not plan on following suit after the sixmonth ban expires. The agency is developing a new policy that relies on full disclosure.

By contract, Aldus was required to disclose all 3PM or placement agent arrangements (See excerpt from the Professional Services Agreement included as Attachment E.) However, it did not do so until ERB's Chief Investment Officer requested the information about 18 months ago. At the same time, ERB staff also started sending questionnaires directly to the general partners (GPs) of the funds and became increasingly concerned when the GP responses revealed discrepancies with the disclosures provided by Aldus. Poor customer service and other instances of nondisclosure added to this growing unease. ERB Executive Director Jan Goodwin was alerted of the staff's growing dissatisfaction with Aldus soon after taking up the position in April 2008.

According to ERB, staff was considering recommending ERB terminate its relationship with Aldus when the New York case erupted. That dissatisfaction grew when ERB staff started learning about important developments regarding the New York investigation from the press instead of from Aldus itself. After a teleconference in which the recently arrested founder of Aldus, Saul Meyer, did not adequately address various concerns, staff made a recommendation to ERB to suspend Aldus, which it did at its April 2009 meeting.

Similarly, SIC staff has requested 3PM information be disclosed by recipients of permanent fund investments for sometime. However, SIC members apparently did not receive this information until the April 2009 special meeting after the New York investigation became public.

POTENTIAL WEAKNESSES

Recent events suggest that existing policies and procedures might be ineffective. The pay-to-play scheme alleged in New York and its spillover into New Mexico provide the Legislature the opportunity to re-examine the way the state manages its permanent and pension funds to ensure the prudent management of public money and restore taxpayer confidence.

Whether the future reveals an illegal pay-to-play scheme in New Mexico or not, the appearance of impropriety risks losing public confidence. Identifying weaknesses regarding New Mexico's management of its pension and permanent funds suggests ways the state can better address and manage these risks.

Governance. A distinguishing factor in the New York case concerns governance, or how an agency is structured regarding investment decisions and oversight. In New York, very few people had direct authority over the investment decisions of the fund, which resulted in an overconcentration of power with insufficient checks and balances. This structure differs significantly from the current model of governance in New Mexico, where alternative investment decisions generally include a chief investment officer (CIO), agency staff, outside consultants, investment committees and the agency boards or councils. This layered structure of oversight would appear to provide a robust assurance of ethical and competent outcomes. However, its efficacy is dependent on two primary factors: the expertise and independence of the decision makers.

Expertise of Members. Expertise in this context means knowledge gained from being a professional in the investment industry. Since the enactment of the Prudent Investor Act, the necessary level of expertise has widened from traditional asset classes to include alternative investment strategy. Because the agency boards generally make final alternative investment decisions, the issue of board member expertise has correspondingly risen in importance. While both pension funds have initiated more vigorous training programs, neither plan currently requires professional expertise as a prerequisite for any of the elected or appointed board positions. This lack of expertise might contribute to board members relying heavily on the chief investment officer.

Financial sophistication is necessary in order for board members to understand and, when necessary, challenge proposals from staff and contracted advisors. In addition, complicated investments might be oversimplified without proper disclosure of all inherent risks. ERB's decision to invest in the Vanderbilt collateralized debt obligation (CDO) for example, may have rested primarily on its AAA rating without the board's full appreciation of risks identified by general consultant, NEPC.

In contrast, public members of the SIC are required by statute (Section 6-8-2, NMSA 1978), public members appointed as members of SIC to "be qualified by competence and experience in the field of investment or finance," and "shall not be engaged in any capacity in the sale of securities to the state." However, no board members publicly questioned staff or advisors about 3PM before April's special meeting.

Independence of Board Members. Boards are composed of appointed members, elected members and ex officio members. Attachment F includes the composition of the two pension boards and SIC as of May 2009.

- "The committee recommends the Legislature consider expanding ERB board membership or require additional members to have investment or public finance experience."
- -Report of the Legislative Finance Committee, January 2004

- "The committee recommends the full Legislature consider restructuring ERB's membership to encourage active participation."
- -Report of the Legislative Finance Committee, January 2003

Diversity amongst board members greatly improves board independence and the decision making process. However, if members are few or inactive, independence has the potential to be weak. Board governance for ERB, with only seven members and regular meetings scheduled bi-monthly, is an example. As far back as 2003, LFC began recommending that the Legislature consider restructuring ERB's membership to improve governance. More recently, the August 2006 LFC brief raised a red flag regarding the events that surrounded the hiring of Aldus in 2006, as excerpted below.

From the August 4, 2006 LFC Hearing Brief:

"ERB is currently in contract negotiations with Aldus Equity, who also advises the SIC on private equity investments, for its private equity consultant. There are some concerns regarding this procurement, as the records indicate a significant difference of opinion between the ERB staff members and the board members on the Investment Committee.

An investment staff memorandum to the board dated May 31, 2006 documents the procurement history as required by policy. Of the ten firms that responded to the RFP, eight were independently analyzed by members of the review committee consisting of three staff members and one board member. On April 18, 2006 the review committee met and selected four finalists to be interviewed by the Investment Committee. Based on these interviews, the Investment Committee eliminated two of the finalists. Of the two remaining finalists, ERB staff recommended Hamilton Lane based on its size and dominant presence in this market, while the three board members chose Aldus, based primarily on cost and the company's reported thorough due diligence practice. The four voting members of the Investment Committee ultimately voted 3 to 1 to hire Aldus Equity.

The board vote was also split, the majority accepting the Investment Committee's recommendation of Aldus, while the two dissenters supported the staff recommendation of Hamilton Lane. Finally, according to a July 12, 2006 Albuquerque Journal article, a contribution made by Aldus to the NM Highland University "president fund" raises questions regarding Aldus's political activities within New Mexico."

During the 2009 legislative session, the Legislature passed Senate Bill 460, which sought to increase both the level of expertise and independence of SIC. The bill would have increased the number of

Salary Of Agency Investment Officers

SIC: Gary Bland $308,381

ERB: Bob Jacksha $172,156

PERA: Bob Gish $192,472

Salary Of Agency Executive Directors

ERB: Jan Goodwin $130,959

PERA:Terry Slattery $143,015

SIC members from nine to 13 while simultaneously decreasing the number of members appointed by the governor. The bill would have further required that all new public members have "no less than 10 years experience in the field of investment or finance." The bill was vetoed by the governor without comment.

Whether members of a board fully incorporate staff recommendations in their deliberations or simply "rubber stamp" advisor or investment committee recommendations is an important issue and difficult to discern. The Private Equity Investment Advisory Committee (PEIAC), an SIC subcommittee, has on a number of occasions failed to approve potential investments brought before it by external advisors and SIC staff. On four occasions for PERA and five for ERB, staff disapproval of a proposal was sufficient to kill a deal.

Investment Staff. With the advent of alternative investments, staff requirements have soared. Agencies requested but did not always receive additional FTE to handle the due diligence associated with such assets. In addition, resources were not always allocated in a timely manner. For example, PERA received 2 FTE for its investment group for FY09 and is just now filling them. Although the agency points to the hiring freeze for the delay, it appears the funding may have been allocated to pay seven in-band pay hikes applied in FY08 in the effort to retain the staff it had. How the state deals with the comparatively high salaries for investment FTE and ensures it is retaining quality staff is an ongoing issue. SIC also requested an additional FTE for alternative investment due diligence in its FY10 budget request. It received additional funds for legal fees related to alternative investment due diligence but did not receive the expansion FTE. Investment staff for SIC, ERB, and PERA are listed in Attachment G.

Investment Policy. As previously discussed, there are currently no written formal polices regarding 3PM disclosure despite apparent discussions and "informal policies" on the matter.

The working group recommendation (Attachment A) served as an outline for House Bill 876, which passed unanimously by the Legislature and was signed into law by the governor under Laws 2009, Chapter 152. The bill, sponsored by Representative Miguel Garcia, prohibits SIC, ERB, or PERA from making any direct investment without full disclosure of all 3PM relationships and payments from the prospective investment fund. Furthermore, any individual who "knowingly withholds" such information will now be guilty of a fourth degree felony.

Disclosure and Transparency. Up until this point, no agency CIO had required a breakdown of the fees being paid to investment firms, including any third-party fees as a condition of investing.

One defense proposed by SIC was that because the agency didn't pay the fees directly, they were a cost to the investment firm and not SIC and the information wasn't relevant. However, this defense does not address two separate issues: whether the payments were legal and whether they were embedded in the fees SIC was paying the investment firms.

NEXT STEPS

Agency Reviews. All three investment agencies are internally reviewing their respective investment practices, and ERB is considering conducting an outside investigation into its procurement process in general and of Aldus in particular. While these reviews are a healthy step in resolving the aforementioned weaknesses, it may be prudent for all state investment agencies to perform independent reviews of their business and procurement practices.

Federal Regulations. Federal regulators, including the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board (MSRB), have also been considering reviewing various investment practices related to 3PM and pay-to-play. At present, the only significant rule governing investment professionals and campaign contributions is MSRB Rule G-37. The rule was enacted in April of 1994 and prohibits securities dealers from engaging in negotiated municipal securities business with an issuer, such as New Mexico, for a period of two years if they make political contributions to an official with influence over the award of a municipal bond business. Many industry experts believe that the enactment and subsequent revisions of this rule may have served to somewhat displace financial sector political contributions into the less regulated arena of alternative investments.

Role of the Legislature. The Legislature plays an important role in relation to the state's pension and permanent funds by providing public accountability and oversight. House Bill 876, which requires disclosure of all 3PM arrangements related to the investments of SIC, ERB, and PERA, will go a long way in mitigating the potential for pay-to-play in New Mexico. The Legislature must now contemplate whether or not House Bill 876 should be expanded to include all state entities with investment functions, or whether the state should go even further by statutorily placing an outright prohibition on 3PM relative to state investments. Both of these questions are likely to be posed to the Legislature during the next legislative session.

The Board of Finance awarded the Department of Administration (DFA) $150 thousand to contract for an outside fiduciary audit of the State Treasurer's Office in 2005. How the proposed LCS/BOF review would be funded would need to be determined.

Recent Developments:

- The governor has agreed to an outside audit of the three investment agencies.
- The governor also suggests he will support a proposal to expand the number of SIC board members as long as it does not dilute executive "majority control."
- business with the SIC are banned from making political contributions to elected officials or people seeking political office that may have influence over the SIC. That ban continues over the term of the investment and extends for a two year period.
- SIC is prohibited from knowingly investing in companies who have made such political contributions for two years prior to seeking the investment.

Additionally, continuing the tradition of strong oversight by interim committees is critical. One option would be to hire a third party to perform an independent forensic or business review as a follow up to the review performed by PFM for LFC. At its May meeting, the Legislative Council passed a motion directing Legislative Council Service (LCS) staff to partner with the State Board of Finance (BOF) to perform a fiduciary audit of all three state investment agencies. Given the longer period that agencies have been active in the area of alternative investments, such a review would further identify key weaknesses in policies and procedures and provide specific "best practices" recommendations.

The results of such independent reviews could then be directly reported to both the Investments Oversight Committee (IOC) and LFC. Ultimately, it is imperative that both IOC and LFC continuously re-examine the practices of state investment agencies to ensure that taxpayer money is being invested prudently and responsibly in New Mexico.

OUESTIONS

- 1. Why wasn't the recommendation to implement a formal 3PM policy ever formally heard by SIC, ERB, or PERA?
- 2. Regardless of the fact that the state itself was not paying 3PM, why did staff treat 3PM as non-germane to the investment process and not keep track of 3PM payments?
- 3. Why did ERB and SIC staff, who knew as early as 2005 that 3PM payments existed relative to state investments as evidenced by the 2005 policy recommendation and contractual requirements that Aldus disclose such payments, choose not to alert or disclose 3PM agreements to board members?
- 4. Why did ERB staff recommend that the board hire Hamilton Lane instead of Aldus as private equity advisor in 2006?
- 5. Is full disclosure of 3PM payments sufficient to ensure against conflicts of interest and or corruption, or should the Legislature consider an outright statutory prohibition on 3PM payments in relation to public investments?
- 6. Are the agencies taking any action toward those fund managers that refused to disclose third-party information?
- 7. Have any of the investment agencies been in contact with the New Mexico Attorney General's Office regarding third-party payments? What was the response?

Recommendation:

Publicly Traded Equities

Make publicly available: A report for the appropriate oversight board on at least a quarterly basis disclosing commissions paid to each broker/dealer, including those generated by both internal and external portfolio managers.

Fixed Income Securities

Make publicly available: A report for the appropriate oversight board on at least a quarterly basis disclosing all fixed-income purchases and sales transactions and the trading volume of such transactions with each broker/dealer, including those generated by both internal and external portfolio managers.

Issue: Potential misuse of broker/dealers (i.e. steering a disproportionate amount of trades to certain broker/dealers)

Recommendation 1: Use electronic trading where appropriate AND Recommendation 2: Retain all supporting documentation (electronic or otherwise), that demonstrates that a competitive process was utilized in each transaction.

C. Internal Controls - Internal transactions

ONLY

Issue: Potential misuse of trading authorization

Recommendation: Outline internal controls in investment policy requiring specific trading procedures and obtain review and approval of policy by the appropriate oversight board. These should include requirements for a second person to sign off on each trade, minimum qualifications for traders, and maintaining appropriate documentation for each trade.
