1 judicial, law enforcement, community treatment providers, those 2 with lived experience and community support networks; and

3 WHEREAS, the latest research from the department of health
4 shows that two thousand six hundred forty-two New Mexicans have 5 lost their lives to unintentional overdoses between 2016 and 6 2020; and

7 WHEREAS, according to the national institute on drug 8 abuse, synthetic opioids, which include fentanyl, were the most 9 common drugs involved in overdose deaths in the United States;
10 and

11 WHEREAS, the department of health notes that fentanyl-
12 involved overdose rates have steadily increased in New Mexico 13 and, in 2020, have accounted for more than one-third of 14 overdose deaths in the state; and

15 WHEREAS, the department of health also notes that in 2020, 16 the death rate for fentanyl cases was nearly seven times what 17 it was in 2016; and

18 WHEREAS, no single system, not judicial, law enforcement, 19 treatment services or families, is solely equipped to manage
20 the multifaceted problem of fentanyl use, abuse and addiction;
21 and

22 WHEREAS, the fentanyl epidemic as it exists today requires 23 a collaborative approach to include the legislature, the 24 judicial system, law enforcement, the department of health's
25 harm reduction program, detention facilities, treatment
