2 RECOGNIZING THE IMPORTANCE OF FORESTS TO THE STATE.

3
4 WHEREAS, New Mexico is well known for its beautiful and

6 economic benefits and make New Mexico the land of 7 enchantment; and

8 WHEREAS, New Mexico's forests cover almost one-third of 9 the state, or twenty-four million seven hundred thousand
10 acres, with forty-two percent being privately owned, 11 including tribal lands; and

12 WHEREAS, forests provide essential ecological services,
13 such as providing a habitat for wildlife, oxygen, clean
14 water, the uptake of carbon dioxide and cooling temperatures.
15 As one student said, "Forests are not just trees, they are 16 life.". As another student said, "If forests disappear, many 17 species won't have a home."; and

18 WHEREAS, forests provide cultural connections that are 19 essential to the rich heritage of New Mexico, and families
20 throughout New Mexico have loved the land, including forests,
21 for generations. As one student said, "My grandpa and I go 22 to the forest to hunt piñon nuts."; and

23 WHEREAS, the loss of forests takes away the culture, way
24 of life and income for many New Mexicans – from grazing, 25 collecting firewood, harvesting medicinal herbs and wood for

1 latillas, hunting and other activities; and

2 WHEREAS, outdoor recreation, including recreation in the 3 forests, brings in billions of dollars to New Mexico's 4 economy and makes up more than two and one-tenth percent of 5 the state's gross domestic product; and

6 WHEREAS, mental wellness, which can be found through 7 connection with the forest, is priceless. As one student 8 said, "The forest is a peaceful place where I go to clear my 9 mind.". As another student said, "Forests provide 10 sanctuary."; and

11 WHEREAS, forests are under threat from drought,
12 catastrophic wildfires, rising temperatures, trash,
13 overcrowding of trees and bark beetles. As one student said,
14 "Everything in the forest is connected. If one thing dies, 15 others die, too."; and

16 WHEREAS, people can help prevent catastrophic wildfires
17 by putting out campfires, not throwing cigarette butts out of 18 car windows and educating others about how to keep the forest 19 safe; and

20 WHEREAS, New Mexico's 2020 Forest Action Plan calls for 21 the support and expansion of public outreach and education to 22 "foster a society that supports watershed restoration
23 activities and values resilient and healthy forest 24 ecosystems"; and

25 WHEREAS, many New Mexicans are unaware of the importance

1 of forests and the threats to them; and

2 WHEREAS, the urgency for forest education is growing,
3 and education and outreach can help develop the next
4 generation of environmental stewards;

16 BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the state agencies involved 17 in protecting forests be encouraged to continue to invest in 18 education and outreach, using social media, student work and
